

Bob Pro
bobpro.app

FOR A SPORTS CLUB

The whole club, without a single phone number

Coaches, parents, teams. Call-ups, training, pitches and the refreshment stand. In one place — and what is written there stays between you.

Address

bobpro.app

Who for

Football clubs and other team sports

Version

September 2026

Screens

Real captures from the app

About this document

What Bob Pro does today for a club, screen by screen, and then what it does not do.

Every capture comes from the application itself, on a demonstration space: Rivière Football Club, its coaches, its board, two age groups and the parents. Nothing here is a mock-up.

1. The problem it solves
2. Six principles
3. Who is who at the club
4. One channel per team
5. The squad
6. Matches and training
7. Pitches, balls and kits
8. Who sees what
9. Your data, and the encryption
10. Up and running in five minutes
11. What Bob Pro does not replace
12. What we are building

In short

One space for the club, divided into channels — one per team. Each person only enters the ones they belong to. You sign up under a nickname: no phone number, no email address, so a coach never hands their mobile to forty families. Messages and calls are end-to-end encrypted.

1 The problem it solves

One group chat per team, one per the coaches, and a coach whose number ends up everywhere.

A club runs on goodwill and on phone numbers. A coach creates a group for their age group, gives out their mobile, and keeps it for the next five seasons — including with the families who left. The board has its own group, the coaches another, and nobody is sure which one a message went to.

Then Saturday comes: the call-up, the car sharing, the half-time oranges and the pitch booking all live in the same thread, and the message that matters has scrolled away.

What Bob Pro replaces

Today	With Bob Pro
One group chat per team, each with everyone's number	One space for the club, one channel per team. People join by nickname.
The coach's personal mobile, handed to forty families	A nickname. You call inside the app, and a call reaches the whole channel.
"Who can drive on Saturday?" asked every week	A need with a number: 3 seats of 8, and who is covering them.
A pitch double-booked because two coaches did not talk	Pitches booked by slot, with opening hours.
The board's business, readable by every parent	A Board channel the parents do not see, and do not know exists.
A family leaves the club: they keep the history	You remove them: the group key is renewed, they read nothing new.

The point that matters most

What circulates in a club group concerns children: who is playing, who is injured, who is being picked up and by whom. On Bob Pro those messages are encrypted on the phone that sends them. And the coach keeps their private number private — which is what makes volunteers stay.

2 Six principles

One space, one channel per team

The club is a single space. Inside: a general channel, one for the coaches, one per age group, one for the board.

Everyone sees what concerns them

A U8 parent reads the U8 channel. Not the U7 one, not the coaches', not the board's.

No phone number

You sign up under a nickname. No number, no email, no address book harvested.

End-to-end encrypted

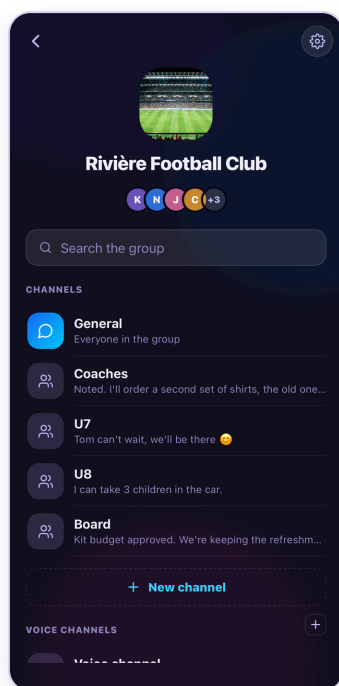

Messages and calls are encrypted on the device. Nobody but the recipients can read them.

The words of the game

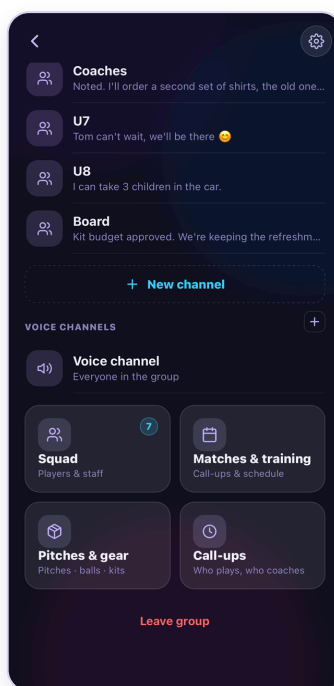

The app says "Squad", "Call-ups", "Matches & training", "Pitches & gear" — not "members" and "events".

Ready in five minutes

You pick the "Club" type: the channels, the roles and the four tools are already there.

The club's space

Four tools, under the channels

3 Who is who at the club

Three levels of access only: owner, manager, member. On top of those, labels you name yourself, with their colour.

Board

The people who run the club. Manager level.

- Create and close channels
- Invite, remove, assign roles
- Book the pitches, approve the kit budget

Coach

One coach per age group. Manager level.

- Posts training and matches for their team
- Writes the call-up
- Reads the coaches' channel

Does not run the other age groups.

Parent

One family, one account. Member level.

- Reads and writes in their team's channel
- Answers matches and training
- Offers car seats, brings the oranges

Does not see the coaches' or the board's channel.

And the players?

They are not accounts.

- A child has no phone — so a player is a card, not a login
- The card links them to their teams and their parents

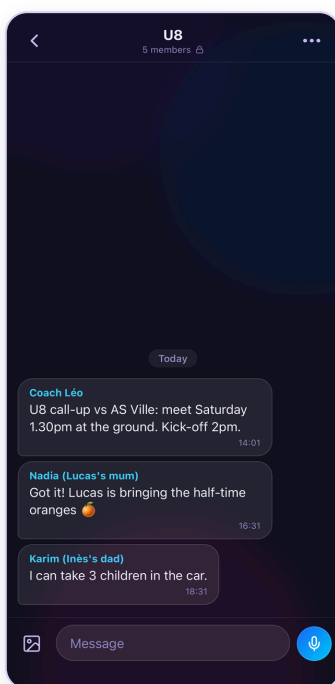

The squad: staff, board and parents

4 One channel per team

This is what a club needs most, and what a single group chat can never do.

Channel	Who is in it	What is said there
General	Everyone	Club-wide announcements, the tournament, the kit.
Coaches	The coaching staff	Splitting the age groups, ordering a second set of shirts.
U7 / U8	One coach and their parents	Call-ups, training times, car sharing, the oranges.
Board	The board	The budget, the refreshment stand, what is decided before it is announced.

The U8 channel: five people

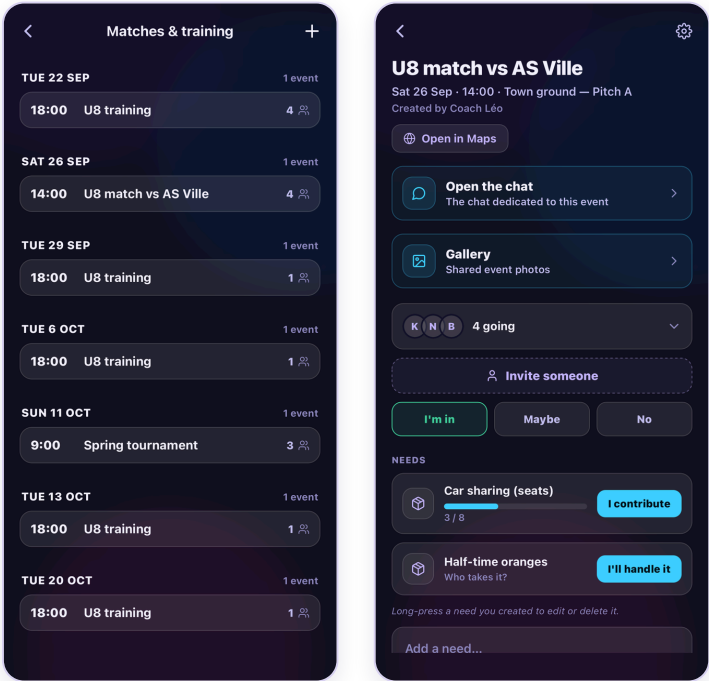

A U7 parent does not see the U8 channel

And does not know it exists. This is not a display setting: the messages are encrypted for the channel's members, and their key does not open them. It is what lets a club of two hundred families stay readable.

A call started from a channel rings all of its members — the coach can reach their nine families at once, encrypted with the group key, without anyone having anyone's number.

5 Matches and training

Everything with a date in one place, and the tally of who is coming.

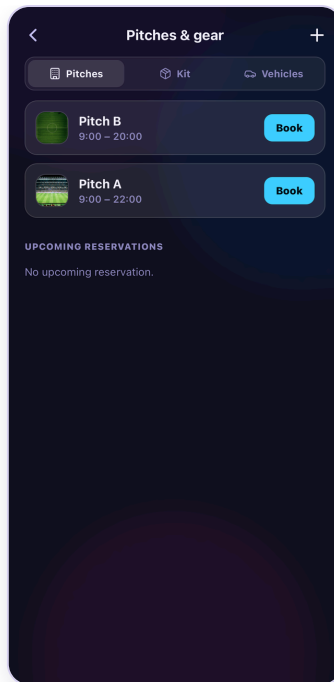

The season, week by week The match, its place and its needs

An entry carries its place, its time, who created it, and three answers: I'm in, maybe, no. It also opens its own chat and its own gallery — the match photos do not clutter the team channel, and neither do the questions about the meeting time.

What you see	What it means
4 going	The tally of replies. Tap to see who.
Car sharing (seats) 3/8	Three seats offered out of eight needed. Any parent can add theirs.
Half-time oranges	A need with no number: somebody takes it, once and for all.
Training, every Tuesday	A repeating entry is created once and comes back on its own.

6 Pitches, balls and kits

Three families, one principle: a resource, opening hours, a quantity, and a booking by slot. No more double-booked pitch, no more hunt for the ball bag.

Two pitches, with their hours

Family	Examples	Booking
Pitches	Main pitch, training pitch	By slot, within the opening hours you set.
Kit	Balls, shirts, bibs, cones	A dated loan, with the quantity available.
Vehicles	The club minibus	By the hour. The quantity prevents double bookings.

Any member can book; only managers create a resource. An upcoming booking shows on the resource, with the name of whoever took it.

7 Who sees what

Action	Board	Coach	Parent
Read the general channel	✓	✓	✓
Read the coaches' channel	✓	✓	✗
Read the board channel	✓	✗	✗
Read another team's channel	if added	✗	✗
Create or close a channel	✓	✓	✗
Invite or remove a family	✓	✓	✗
Post a match or a training session	✓	✓	✗
Answer, offer car seats	✓	✓	✓
Book a pitch	✓	✓	✗
Create a resource	✓	✓	✗
Call a channel, or one person	✓	✓	✓

✓ yes · ✗ no · "if added" = only if that person was added to the channel. Access is set channel by channel, not by role alone.

8 Your data, and the encryption

What is encrypted, what is not, and what we do not know about you.

Data	Where it lives
Messages (text, photos, voice notes)	End-to-end encrypted. The server only stores unreadable material.
Calls	End-to-end encrypted, one to one and for a whole channel alike.
Match titles, needs	Encrypted with the entry's own key: only the people invited can read them.
Bookings, call-up slots	Readable on the server: dates and quantities, not content.
Your identity	A nickname. No number, no email, no imported address book.

No player account

A child has no phone, and Bob Pro does not pretend otherwise: a player is a card, not a login. The card links them to their teams and their parents — the parents are the ones with accounts.

What encryption does not do

It protects the content, not the device. And a photo of a match is still a photo of children: the club's rules on image rights apply exactly as they do anywhere else.

9 Up and running in five minutes

- 1 Install the app
On the App Store or Google Play, "Bob Pro". Nothing to pay.
- 2 Choose a nickname
No number, no email. The app tells you straight away whether it is free.
- 3 Put the backup key somewhere safe
It is what lets you find your account again on a new phone.
- 4 Create the group, "Club" type
The channels, the roles and the tools arrive already set up.
- 5 Invite the coaches
By nickname, or by sharing the group's invite code.
- 6 One team at a time
Open a channel for one age group, invite its families, run a season of it. Then the next.

The order that works best

Do not switch the whole club over in one evening. One age group, for a month, with its coach — when the parents of that team stop asking "what time on Saturday?", the other coaches will ask you for it.

The cost

Every feature is free during the launch, with no payment method to enter. The app says so itself: "PRO will become paid, you will be told — no surprise charge."

10 What Bob Pro does not replace

- It is not club management software. No memberships, no licences, no subscriptions, no export for the federation.
- It is not a results or league table service. Scores and standings live with the federation.
- It is not a payment tool. Subscriptions, kit and tournament fees are settled elsewhere.
- The shared document library is work in progress, not a delivered feature.

Bob Pro handles the weekly life of a club: who is playing, who is driving, who has the keys to the pitch. That is already what takes up most of a volunteer's time.

11 What we are building

With no date announced: we would rather ship than promise.

Group calls SHIPPED

A call started from a team channel rings its families at once. Encrypted with the group key.

Shared documents IN PROGRESS

A library per group: medical forms, rules, season plans. With access set by role.

Presence and "typing..." SHIPPED

You can see who is online and who is writing. Already in place.

Desktop dashboard SHIPPED

For the board: schedule, resources and entries from a browser, with the backup key as the login.

Talking to us

By email

contact@bobpro.app

Seeing the app in motion

bobpro.app/en/videos.html — the getting-started film, in English.

Prepared in September 2026 from the version in production. The captures come from a demonstration space; no real person's data appears in them.